

Question 6*Answer: True

Children who are capable of forming their own views are entitled to participate and express their views in matters that affect them. For example, children should be given the opportunity to express their views when a decision of expulsion from school is under consideration. The views of children will be given due weight in accordance with their age and maturity.